April 25, 2001 LB 543

a political man and I'm going to deal with it on that basis. Why do you think you have a separate fund set aside for them? And then these people will tack on Protestants or whatever they're called. They're called something else, I'm sure, by the Catholics. One thing we know. They're not on a par with Catholicism and Catholics because the Catholics put out a paper saying that all the rest of you all who are Christian, you're just tack ons. You're not right. The church is the only true faith and it's the only way to get to heaven. There was one Jesuit. He was thinking about this and it occurred to him that maybe not everybody had heard about Christ, so he speculated about the possibility of getting to heaven without Jesus's help and that God would be able to make a way for people to get to heaven who didn't know anything about Christ, and the Vatican now jumped in and they have him changing and clarifying that. Don't tell me that the church is not a political entity. They are dictating to these Catholic universities as to what the composition of the board of directors should be. They haven't made it an outright dictate yet because they're afraid of that and they don't want to run away money, and you know what the reaction of the Catholics was? When we try to get federal funds, it's going to be hard because that stamps us strictly as a Catholic university, based on religion, and we don't want that; we can still do what we want to do, put the courses in, but we don't want it said right out front what we are; we need a little wiliness, we need a little trickery, we need a little Machiavellianism. And I understand that because I know the Catholic Church is a political organization, just like I know that Jesse Jackson is a politician and I've recommended that he drop the "Reverend" from in front of his name and just acknowledge that he's what he is. And the church ought to do the same thing. They ought to have a religious arm over there where these sentimental people can go and then...

SENATOR CUDABACK: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...have this other warring arm over here, like the Irish do in Ireland. What my amendment does is to give the churches that offering that some people in this body feels must be given, and it's based on political clout of the church. That's what it is. It's not concern for students. It's clearly
